Time to check out The Bolgart Bell Tower which was built as a fun alternative to the Swan Bell Tower in Perth, a subject of great controversy. As populations of many country towns have declined, businesses have had to close and perhaps the saddest moment is when the local pub puts a closed sign on its door. Fortunately for Bolgart, the locals were not willing to let that happen. While this isn't the first community to come together and invest their funds into a local business, such as the pub, few have a vision that is as exciting as what is planned for the Bolgart Hotel. While their plans might seem ambitious, a consortium of people from Bolgart and one or two from surrounding areas are passionate enough to make it happen, including the plan to establish a micro-brewery and cidery in conjunction with Funk Cider. They want the pub to thrive again and return it to being the heart of the town. Bolgart farmers Paul Michael and Edward Ludemann are two of the more than 30 individual people from 16 families who make up the syndicate that purchased the pub in early May 2020.
